TRANS-AMAZON NETWORK ENCOUNTER

OVERVIEW

Leaders from each Amazonian tribal network will gather together to plan collaboratively. Their dialogue and exchange of experiences will advance the ministry work among the different tribal networks of the Amazon region in a cohesive, unified manner. Personal interaction and physical presence will enhance communication and strengthen ties, as together they move forward within their cultural reality towards strengthening the indigenous Church of the Amazon to fulfill the Great Commission.

AMAZON-WIDE WOMEN'S TRIBAL NETWORK

OVERVIEW

Each network of Amazonian indigenous Christian leaders has also been developing a branch specifically dedicated to and led by the women of that network. These networks of women are ready to formalize their partnership, coordinating efforts across multiple countries. Their focus is to equip tribal women to become a powerful, Godly influence in their own families, communities, and the world still waiting to hear the Good News.

TRIBAL NETWORK COMMUNICATIONS

OVERVIEW

Communication is key! The Presidents of tribal networks aim to maintain contact with ministry leaders across remote regions on a consistent basis, coordinating efforts and providing training, counsel, and encouragement. However, cell phone and internet service can be weak and unreliable in areas. Access to better technology can be such a useful tool in ministry! Zoom meetings & messaging capabilities help bridge the distance across remote rainforest areas.

FACE -TO- FACE

Leaders of the Three Waves Movement live literally thousands of miles from some of the people with whom they collaborate. The capabilities of communicating through technology are amazing, but physically being together in the same space is an experience that can't quite be replicated. Part of ministering with indigenous people is that it requires face-to-face interactions. Group consensus is essential, and relationships are highly valued.
